Traveling through Europe earlier in 2016, my wife and I saw the beautiful scenery of Switzerland, France, and Italy.

In France, we slept in the village of Chamonix, at the foothills of Mont Blanc.

The ratio of older people to younger people was astonishing. Europe is getting older, and it's not just Europe – Japan, the United States, Canada, and most of the developed world is experiencing a demographic change called the “The Age Wave.”

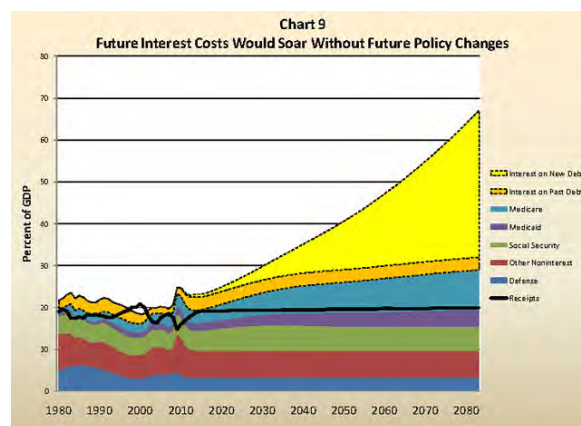

This age pyramid shows the typical characteristic of demography throughout the Western World.

Human beings now live longer and fuller lives, and in the near future, Centenarians (people 100+ years old) will be common. This is obviously putting a huge toll on social systems.

The accumulated benefits promised to retirees are far and beyond anything that tax revenues can sustain.

If you believe that your retirement can be sustained for the long-term, you might soon find out the case is not so.

The only reason that the Federal Government can afford to pay you is because the U.S. dollar is the world's reserve currency. This “magic” allows the U.S. to issue more and more currency and pay for real goods with it. This isn't a sustainable system, and we are already seeing signs of this monetary system coming to an end.

QE programs have made the total debt of the U.S. quadruple. On top of that, central banks around the globe have lowered interest rates into negative territory, where they have never been prior.

The Bank of Japan is resorting to the same “currency printing” tactics, and it’s becoming ridiculous.

The Japanese market is becoming more and more nationalized, and Europe is no different. The ECB (European Central Bank) has been creating enormous stimulus measures, led by Mario Draghi.

The Money Supply "Goes Vertical"

Increase in Fed Base Money (1996-2015)

That’s why Britain exited the Euro and other countries are considering following suit.

China is making moves daily to undermine this dollar-dominated system and replace it with a BRIC system (Brazil, Russia, India, China). They have already joined the SDR fund, which is a monumental geo-political shift.

This change occurred on October 1st of 2016, and there are more big changes to come.

Furthermore, the Chinese and the Russians are accumulating gold reserves in order to prove to the international community that their currency reserves can be trusted.

These trends will impact the retirement you have been promised.

For one, pension funds are struggling to earn yields. Normally, what they invest in are fixed-income instruments, such as bonds, but those are yielding ridiculously low figures today.

These mega-factors should be on your mind as you plan to design a life where most of your active income is disappearing, and you rely upon passive income sources and your life savings to sustain your lifestyle.

Fortressing 55+: Building Your Own Economy for Retirement

The Game Plan

- 1. Staying Active: The best course of action to consider is to not fully retire from business. First, if you do what you love and get paid for it, what's the point of stopping? Instead, learn to trim it down and make it flexible to your other priorities. An additional benefit of this is that you keep your contacts and network and stay current on industry news. If you choose to return to business or are forced to, it's like you never left.
- 2. Retire Next Year: If you haven't saved enough for a comfortable retirement in the U.S., realize that there are countless places that you can afford to retire in next year with as little as $20,000. If you want to get creative, I know many who are leaving the U.S. and retiring in Central America or Southeast Asia by opening up beach bars and living in paradise.

In fact, some retire and teach English, take pictures for magazines, run B&Bs, and more. The main idea is to choose a fabulous location in a country that is far cheaper than the Western World, and enjoy paradise.

3. Portfolio Management: Your highest priority is safety. It is imperative that you allocate a portion of your savings into precious metals – physical coins or bullion. This will act as an insurance policy against reckless central banks and Federal Government misconduct.

Another important product that is worth your time is whole life insurance policies.

This is a far better insurance policy than anything you have seen on the market, and I will be writing a Special Report dedicated to that subject exclusively.

Wealth Stocks: These companies will help you grow your net-worth annually with far less risk than index funds, and you won't be paying any management fees.

A 9.5% return is absolutely doable. In fact, our previous stock picks have returned almost double those returns.

REITs or Rental Real Estate: Depending on your expertise, you can diversify into real estate assets, as the yields today are very attractive in some places throughout the U.S. If you lack the experience and don't want to learn the ropes, invest in a liquid REIT. The beauty here is that some of my favorite REITs own the type of real estate that an individual rarely owns – nursing homes, hospitals, mini-storage units, and more. The yield can be 6%-10% annually.

The Demand for Gold Has Grown by Record Amounts

This is just the beginning of an epic multi-year bull market in commodities, and you should consider allocating funds towards this sector.

The demand for gold, for example, is soaring, while new discoveries are far and between.

We have researched 758 companies this year and right now, we are focusing most of our analyses on gold, silver, zinc, lithium, cobalt, and specialty metals.

Retirement as you thought you knew it is a hoax, and now is the time to take major action in order to claim what's yours: a hassle-free retirement.
